

Deborah K. Hyman

Deborah Hyman is a global corporate communications executive who builds and supports innovative, collaborative, and purpose-driven cultures for Fortune 500 companies. She currently leads HR communications for MetLife—one of the world's leading financial services companies with 59,000 employees in more than 40 countries. As a former journalist and current PR technology leader, Deborah has centered her career around storytelling. Curiosity has woven her career through public and private sectors including technology, finance, insurance, aerospace and defense industries. Deborah's expertise includes building strategies for executive and employee communications, diversity and inclusion, philanthropy, social media and employer branding initiatives that deliver results.

Prior to joining MetLife in 2018, Deborah has grown her career by serving in positions with increasing leadership responsibilities at Northrop Grumman, the National Council for Compensation Insurance, Verizon, Freddie Mac, and Jefferson Lab—a nuclear physics research laboratory. She began her career as a reporter at a Tribune Company newspaper, the Daily Press.

Deborah has been recognized by numerous PR organizations and has received awards from E2E, IABC, PR News and APEX. She was recently recognized as one of South Florida's Most Powerful and Influential Black Leaders. She is frequently requested to share her expertise on winning global employee engagement strategies and the future of work.

Deborah is president emeritus of the National Black Public Relations Society, Inc. and serves on its Presidents Council. She is also a member of the Public Relations Society of America and the International Association of Business Communicators.